Reply in Logan Court to Attorney Rich.

(Special to The Herald.) Logan, 30.—A rather unusual incident enlivened the proceedings in the district court last evening. The case of Henry Builock vs. the Spring Creek Water company, in which the plaintiff sues to establish a right to e certain portion of the waters of Spring creek, has been on trial for several days. Thomas Stirland, the vice president of the water company, was on the wit-Thomas Stirland, the vice president of the water company, was on the witness stand and became nettled at the cross-examination which Attorney George Q. Rich subjected him to. When the lawyer finally put the question to him: "Why did your face flush after answering the last question?" Stirland replied:

"Thomas Stirland, the vice president of the witness stand and became nettled at the exception of flour none of these articles is being imported into Brazil from the United States in any quantity at the present time. As for flour, the imports, formerly 1,800,000 barrels per cent.
